

Hey, Alberta! HAVE HEARING LOSS?

There may be financial assistance available to you.

PRIVATE HEALTH PLANS

Many adults have extended health benefits through their employer or through other insurance plans (such as Greenshield and Blue Cross). These plans will cover varying amounts toward the cost of hearing devices, usually at repeating intervals (for example, every 3 or 5 years are common intervals).

VETERANS AFFAIRS CANADA (VAC)

Any veteran could qualify for coverage through VAC if hearing loss is determined to be due, in part, to military noise exposure. VAC will cover a new set of hearing devices every 4 calendar years, as well as repairs and batteries.

INDIGENOUS SUPPORT

Coverage for hearing aids may be available through Health Canada NIHB (Non-Insured Health Benefits), FNHA (First Nations Health Authority), FNIHB (First Nations and Inuit Health Branch), or Akwesasne Non-Insured Health Benefits, whichever applies to your region. Our team can help with eligibility questions and paperwork.

ALBERTA AIDS TO DAILY LIVING (AADL)

People registered with the Alberta Health Care Insurance Plan and who have hearing impairment may be eligible for either Cost Share or Cost Share Exemption funding, where the client is responsible to pay 25% of the cost of their benefits, up to a maximum contribution of $500 per family, per benefit year.

WORKERS' COMPENSATION BOARD OF ALBERTA (WCB-AB)

You may have a history of occupational noise exposure. WCB-AB provides hearing aids, batteries, and repairs for those who have suffered hearing loss from occupational noise exposure. Claims can be processed even in retirement. People covered under WCB-AB may be eligible for new hearing aids after 5 years. We can also assist you in completing your WCB-AB claim form.

ASSURED INCOME FOR THE SEVERELY HANDICAPPED PROGRAM

AISH recipients may qualify for the Hearing Aid Benefit through the Alberta Aids to Daily Living Program. They must provide Proof of AISH Coverage during their hearing care appointment to begin the process.

FINANCING OPTIONS

For those who are unable to pay for hearing devices in full up-front, we offer in-house financing options with affordable payment plans and no credit checks.
